Friday morning, the editors and their wives were taken through the huge plants of Ford of Canada. We saw everything from the trade school where promising young men were given the opportunity for higher learning in the business of making motor cars, and from whose graduating classes future supervisors were chosen—the foundry, the making of motors, the assembly lines. Everything.

At noon, we were the guests again of Ford at an excellent luncheon, followed by an address by Mr. Gordon C. Garbutt, director of public relations for Ford. In the afternoon, we were taken by the company to Greenfield Village outside Detroit where the late Henry Ford had made a shrine of Americana. It was raining so a tour through the Edison Institute, a museum, was substituted for the tour of the grounds originally planned.

Business sessions kept us occupied until noon when we were guests of the Chrysler Corporation at the banquet where the "better newspaper competitions" awards were made, and John Marshall, associate editor of the Windstor Star, was guest speaker.

More business in the afternoon, a flurry of prolonged good-byes and "see you soons". And then a peaceful nap until train time. We arrived home on Sunday just as the children were starting upstairs for their rests. Their welcome was breathless. "Why, they really did miss us," said their mother in a wondering voice.

A detailed report of the convention would make booklength reading, but here are a few highlights. We met Mrs. Kate Mather, who many Newmarket people will recall, shortly after our train arrived. Mrs. Mather is running a handicraft business in Windsor and enjoying every minute of it. Dick and Barbara Mather visited us in our hotel room on Saturday afternoon. Both look well and Dick is happy in his job with Ford.

We had seen an assembly line before and were less impressed with its clock-work efficiency than we were with the foundry. It was like a parlor in hell. We were fascinated by the sound and fury of the flames and the reptilian flows of molten metal.

We were treated throughout our stay like royalty. There was a motorcycle escort to and from the plant in the morning and in the afternoon, as far as the Ambassador Bridge on our way to Detroit. On the other side of the bridge, five police cars cleared a way through traffic for our three busses with wonderful efficiency. Our passage through customs was pain-

Editorial page honored

The award of the Legge Memorial Trophy for the best editorial page among weekly newspapers in the Ontario and Quebec division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association is a cause for more pride than we can express.

And what makes the honor doubly sweet is that it is shared by our readers. Recognition for The Era and Express is recognition for Newmarket and dis-

Rural Ontario and Quebec are served by many excellent weekly newspapes. It is with a very real sense of humility that we acknowledge the honor paid The Era and Express by our contemporaries.

Y. G. Jackson, advertising man- Salesmen and travelling shows

Newmarket's Main St. has of late been the frequent market place for draw tickets on all manner of prizes. Most often, the prize is a car which is parked in the centre of the business section while the sponsors of the draw do business at the curb. The distance these salesmen travel to sell their tickets suggests that the province must be thoroughly covered. Some municipalities forbid out-of-town organizations from selling within their boundaries. Perhaps Newmarket too might be advised to follow suit, if only to protect its people from a possible fraud.

There is the danger that if the sale of draw tickets continues to grow at its present rate the province will again outlaw the practice. We have lost track of the legalities of the situation but we seem to recall a postwar attorney general accepting the practice with qualifications intended to limit it lest it become a fertile pasture for professionals and a convenient way to make a killing in the name of good intentions.

We wonder too, while on the subject of restricting these travelling salesmen, if some way could be found to regulate travelling shows. If a circus places an exorbitant value upon its wares, that of course is its business. Attendance at its price is a matter of choice. However, when the town grants a license to a travelling show, it is for many giving that show its blessing. From the comments we have heard, great expectations encouraged by the high admission prices were hardly justified in the most recent instance.

Another try at conservation

A letter has been received by district municipal councils from Mr. A. H. Richardson, chief conservation engineer, department of planning and development, proposing that another meeting to establish a Holland River Conservation Authority be called. This is a happy development, marred only by the passage of some months since the original meeting was adjourned for two or three weeks for lack of a quorum,

It is to be fervently hoped that this time, all municipalities will be represented and the Authority can be proceeded with at once. A year and a half has passed since Mr. Richardson originally proposed the establishment of an Authority. And many years must pass before any large-scale advantages will be had from it. This passage of time, unfortunately, has been variously interpreted as occasion to ask: "What's the harry?" For the citizens of Aurora, the residents of King whose wells have been lowered by increasing demand, those who have built or live downstream from Newnarkel, and many others in various degrees of want and inconvenience for the lack of regulation on the watershed, the answer is all too obvious.

Aurora council this week devoted considerable time to the discussion of water shortage. The municipality can limit water use and adopt other precautions to conserve existing supplies and seek new source, but the permanent answer to their difficulties lies outside their boundaries. Nature is no respector of mulcipal boundaries. It is only by the concerted action of all municipalities within the watershed that each will benefit.

Toronto to try again

With a persistence worthy of a better cause, Toronto will press again its amalgamation argiment before the municipal board on June 19. The city's case is not materially different from that it presented eirlier when York county forced a stay in proceedings on technicalities. The city still insists that the only answer to its, and the suburbs', problems is a centralized administration.

There's no virtue in Toronto's position. The city's major problem is one of expanding costs and limited assessments. If it should succeed in its cause, it may gain temporary respite from the addition of the suburban assessments. But size was the origin of the city's difficulties and to increase its size in an effort to solve those problems does not appear a sensible procedure. Twenty years hence, if the city continues to expand (and there is every indication that it will), the same difficulties will again be present.

Toronto's difficulties will be best solved by restricting its size now and adopting other means of meeting the rising cost of its services. The province already pays sizeable grants; let the predecent be extended. It is a happier alternative to the difficulties of maintaining a larger city in the future. And it is certainly to be preferred to limiting the cost of the city's growth to York county whose residents will pay higher taxes whether they are in the amalgamated area or not.

The confusion and friction which exists among the several municipalities, both between themselves and between them and the city, can be removed should Toronto accept the counter-proposals of a county metropolitan scheme which would provide for intermunicipal commissions to guarantee consistency and continuity of the district development. Toronto steadfastly refuses to acknowledge such a proposal, or variation on it, despite the excellent precedents among the larger cities of the United States.

In this there is evidence, less of reason than of a determined adherence to the trend towards centralization which is the vice of our century. Toronto's present difficulties show the fallacies of the trend; why encourage it?

Newmarket, England

Some weeks ago, in our "Notebook", we spoke of a correspondence we had begun with the editor of the Newmarket Journal in England. It was our hope then that we could exchange a monthly newsletter with our English counterpart and that our respective readers would enjoy reading about the "other Newmarket".

The first of those newsletters is published in this week's issue of The Era and Express under the heading "Newmarket, England". The editor of the Newmarket Journal is Mr. C. F. Jeffrey. He has been editor for six years. He writes with pleasant humor which, we are sure, will commend him to all.

In his initial letter he tells of the origin of the name of his town, an origin which has a likeness to the stories generally associated with the founding of our Newmarket. In the 14th century, a near-by market town was stricken by the plague and the townsfolk fled. They established their "new market" on the present site of the town.

The 14th century is a little early for our Newmarket and it was apparently commercial considerations, rather than those raised by a plague, which caused the founding of a "new market" downstream on the Holland. But there is similarity in the choice of a literally "New Market" for the names of what have become thriving municipalities.

We hope our readers, particularly those recently from over the seas, will enjoy the English newsletters and will be encouraged to comment upon them.

Commendable project

The North York branch of the Garage Operators' Association has in the last few weeks spensored a series of advortisements in The Era and Express and other district newspapers which have carried a forceful message on safety on the highways. It is a commendable undertaking.

This type of advertising is not usually done by small businesses whose resources are somewhat limited compared to those of insurance firms, banks and similar institutions who are usually the sponsors. That local garage owners should contribute to advertising for the bonefit of the public, rather than for immediate benefit for themselves, is indicative of their sincerity.

The participating garage operators are to be congratulated for their example of citizonship.

There are several letters to the editor on the adjoining page. It is an encouraging indication of public interest. There is no more effective manner for the public to air its opinions than through the paper's "letter box". The only condition to writing the editor is that the writer's name be known to the editor.

The state is the servant, not the master, of the people; the state is their guarantee against infringement on their rights, their agent in international and national issues; it is not the function of the state to assume the direction of those activities which rest on individual choice.

The award of the Legge Memorial Trophy for the best editorial page among weekly newspapers in the Ontario and Quebec division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association is a cause for more pride than we can express.

And what makes the honor doubly sweet is that it is shared by our readers. Recognition for The Era and Express is recognition for Newmarket and dis-

Rural Ontario and Quebec are served by many excellent weekly newspapes. It is with a very real sense of humility that we acknowledge the honor paid The Era and Express by our contemporaries.

Y. G. Jackson, advertising man. Salesmen and travelling shows

Newmarket's Main St. has of late been the frequent market place for draw tickets on all manner of prizes. Most often, the prize is a car which is parked in the centre of the business section while the sponsors of the draw do business at the curb. The distance these salesmen travel to sell their tickets suggests that the province must be thoroughly covered. Some municipalities forbid out-of-town organizations from selling within their boundaries. Perhaps Newmarket too might be advised to follow suit, if only to protect its people from a possible fraud.

There is the danger that if the sale of draw tickets continues to grow at its present rate the province will again outlaw the practice. We have lost track of the legalities of the situation but we seem to recall a postwar attorney general accepting the practice with qualifications intended to limit it lest it become a fertile pasture for professionals and a convenient way to make a killing in the name of good intentions.

We wonder too, while on the subject of restricting these travelling salesmen, if some way could be found to regulate travelling shows. If a circus places an exorbitant value upon its wares, that of course is its business. Attendance at its price is a matter of choice. However, when the town grants a license to a travelling show, it is for many giving that show its blessing. From the comments we have heard, great expectations encouraged by the high admission prices were hardly justified in the most recent instance.

A letter has been received by district municipal councils from Mr. A. H. Richardson, chief conservation engineer, department of planning and development. proposing that another meeting to establish a Holland River Conservation Authority be called. This is a happy development, marred only by the passage of some months since the original meeting was adjourned for two or three weeks for lack of a quorum.

It is to be fervently hoped that this time, all municipalities will be represented and the Authority can be proceeded with at once. A year and a half has passed since Mr. Richardson originally proposed the establishment of an Authority. And many years must pass before any large-scale advantages will be had from it. This passage of time, unfortunately, has been variously interpreted as occasion to ask: "What's the hurry?" For the citizens of Aurora, the residents of King whose wells have been lowered by increasing demand, those who have built or live downstream from Newnarket, and many others in various degrees of want and inconvenience for the lack of regulation on the watershed, the answer is all too obvious.

Aurora council this week devoted considerable time to the discussion of water shortage. The municipality can limit water use and adopt other precautions to conserve existing supplies and seek new source, but the permanent answer to their difficulties lies ortside their boundaries. Nature is no respector of mulcipal boundaries. It is only by the concerted action of all municipalities within the watershed that each will benefit.

Toronto to try again

With a persistence worthy of a better cause, Toronto will press again its amalgamation argiment before the municipal board on June 19. The city's case is not materially different from that it presented earlier when York county forced a stay in proceedings on technicalities. The city still insists that the only answer to its, and the suburbs', problems is a centralized administration.

There's no virtue in Toronto's position. The city's major problem is one of expanding costs and limited assessments. If it should succeed in its cause, it may gain temporary respite from the addition of the suburban assessments. But size was the origin of the city's difficulties and to increase its size in an effort to solve those problems does not appear a sensible procedure. Twenty years hence, if the city continues to expand (and there is every indication that it will), the same difficulties will again be present.

Toronto's difficulties will be best solved by restricting its size now and adopting other means of meeting the rising cost of its services. The province already pays sizeable grants; let the predecent be extended. It is a happier alternative to the difficulties of maintaining a larger city in the future. And it is certainly to be preferred to limiting the cost of the city's growth to York county whose residents will pay higher taxes whether they are in the amalgamated area or not.

The confusion and friction which exists among the several municipalities, both between themselves and between them and the city, can be removed should Toronto accept the counter-proposals of a county metropolitan scheme which would provide for intermunicipal commissions to guarantee consistency and continuity of the district development. Toronto steadfastly refuses to acknowledge such a proposal, or variation on it, despite the excellent precedents among the larger cities of the United States.

In this there is evidence, less of reason than of a determined adherence to the trend towards centralization which is the vice of our century. Toronto's present difficulties show the fallacies of the trend; why encourage it?

Newmarket, England

Some weeks ago, in our "Notebook", we spoke of a correspondence we had begun with the editor of the Newmarket Journal in England. It was our hope then that we could exchange a monthly newsletter with our English counterpart and that our respective readers would enjoy reading about the "other Newmarket".

The first of those newsletters is published in this week's issue of The Era and Express under the heading "Newmarket, England". The editor of the Newmarket Journal is Mr. C. F. Jeffrey. He has been editor for six years. He writes with pleasant humor which, we are sure, will commend him to all.

In his initial letter he tells of the origin of the name of his town, an origin which has a likeness to the stories generally associated with the founding of our Nowmarket. In the 14th century, a near-by market town was stricken by the plague and the townsfolk fled. They established their "new market" on the present site of the town.

The 14th century is a little early for our Newmarket and it was apparently commercial considerations, rather than those raised by a plague, which caused the founding of a "new market" downstream on the Holland. But there is similarity in the choice of a literally "Now Market" for the names of what have become thriving municipalities.

We hope our readers, particularly those recently from over the seas, will enjoy the English newsletters and will be encouraged to comment upon them.

Commendable project

The North York branch of the Garage Operators' Association has in the last few weeks sponsored a series of advortisements in The Era and Express and other district newspapers which have carried a forceful message on safety on the highways. It is a commendable undertaking.

This type of advertising is not usually done by small businesses whose resources are somewhat limited compared to those of insurance firms, banks and himilar institutions who are usually the sponsors. That local garage owners should contribute to advertising for the benefit of the public, rather than for immediate benefit for themselves, is indicative of their sincerity.

The participating garage operators are to be congratulated for their example of citizonship,

There are several letters to the editor on the adjoining page. It is an encouraging indication of public interest. There is no more effective manner for the public to air its opinions than through the paper's "letter box". The only condition to writing the editor is that the writer's name be known to the editor.

The state is the servant, not the master, of the people; the state is their guarantee against infringement on their rights, their agent in international and national issues; it is not the function of the state to assume the direction of those activities which rest on individual choice.

SIX TEAMS SURE ENTRIES IN TOWN LOOP

The schedule makers threw their combined genius into shaping the Town League action Friday evening. League will have six teams Hoffman, Davis, Specialty, Bell Telephone, Town "At-omics" and Optimists. Davis Leather and Optimists reported unless help was forthcoming would have to withdraw. League executive voted to allow the Leather men player help from Sangamo, Dixon's, Bender, Price and Mercury Records. Optimists will be able to add to their roster from the overflow of players with the town team. AT BUCLOS PT. Mickey Smith and his executive bustled into making the schedule click and here's the result.

Aurora and Newmarket also staged a marathon fiasco in the play-offs which was umpired by yours truly, with the Redmen playing give-away to beat the dark, and Aurora refusing to take it by stalling on every play.
